PEIPING SCIENTIFIC EXPOSITION

The Scientific Exposition in Peiping was formally opened to the public on 17 February 1950. Workers, peasants, soldiers, students, cadres, children, etc., from the suburban areas Peiping came to visit the exposition. Under the leadership of the Science Popularization Bureau, Ministry of Culture, Central People's Government, some 30 schools, agencies and groups of Peiping participated in the exposition. Personnel from various agencies, teachers from institutions of higher learning, and some 2,000 students from various colleges and secondary schools also participated in the various activities within the exposition ground.

Exhibits of the first section emphasized general health information concerning women and children. The greatest interest was shown by the visitors to the exhibit showing the old and new methods of midwifery. Other exhibits of this section included physiological growth of a woman from youth through maturity to motherhood.

One of the exhibits showed 85 illustrations and 110 models of the evolution. A general scientific section showed many illustrations of chemistry, physics, physiology, geography and psychology.
